“ Mark, Charlie, Chuck and everyone who loved Eleanore... I remember the very first time I met her. She was so proud to show me the house on the hill with the sunken living room and pool. Her kitchen was particularly the most cherished feature since it had been highlighted in a magazine. (Although, I was never really sure if she could cook)

I knew her a long time ago, perhaps in the most difficult, vulnerable time in a young mother's life. She handled that time with grace, fortitude and perseverance. You should all be very proud of her.

May she find eternal peace.

Huge hugs,

T
