“ The most vivid memories of my cousin Georgie center around childhood. Most especially around Christmas. Pre and post Korean War, as a young, handsome soldier, he would enter the room, and I would be thrilled and fascinated by his uniform, his stories, and his gentle and caring attention. He would always find a way to spend time with just me, sitting next to me on the floor, playing with my train set and other Xmas games and toys. He was a hero to me then, and a hero to me now, having served America and gone on to live an honest and good life, building that life from very difficult beginnings. Even though I was just ten to twelve at the time, at now eighty, I remember those early years with him like it was yesterday. God Bless You George Morrison, my very special cousin and hero.
